Denver IP attorney Jeffrey R. Schell, Of Counsel with Hall Estill, recently wrote an article for the Denver Business Journal titled, "Leveraging Patentable IP to Create Successful Ventures."

Schell explains that developing patentable intellectual property (IP) generally is a painstaking process; it's no surprise, then, that patents are often described as the most challenging legal documents across the entire practice of law. For this reason, completing the process perfectly from start to finish poses a daunting challenge.
