Iciss Tillis left the WNBA after three total seasons, but she always had a backup plan.

Tillis, a Cascia Hall Preparatory School graduate who was a first-round pick in the 2004 WNBA Draft after an All-American career at Duke University, is now an Employment Law Attorney at Hall Estill in her hometown of Tulsa.

“I’ve always said that I’ve wanted to be an attorney since I was young,” Tillis told the Tulsa World recently. “I basically tell people my little elevator speech is, ‘I’ve transitioned from the court of basketball to the court of law.’”
