Speculation has now begun about the vaccine mandate's chances with the Supreme Court, and legal experts don't agree. Keith Wilkes, a labor and employment partner at law firm Hall Estill, said that the 6th Circuit's opinion "definitely moves the odds in favor of the OSHA [Emergency Temporary Standard rule] prevailing."

"The Sixth Circuit Opinion shreds the legal arguments of the Petitioners, as well as the analysis and conclusions made by its sister circuit — the Fifth Circuit — last month when it stayed the ETS," Wilkes said by email Monday.
