

Telecommunications

Our Telecommunications attorneys provide legal counsel and policy development expertise to the full spectrum of the telecommunications industry – national, local and long-distance telecommunication carriers; traditional radio and television broadcasters; data and cable networks; and service providers for paging, cellular telephones and personal communications services. We routinely represent clients before the Federal Communications Commission, Federal Appellate Courts and State Public Service Commissions. In addition, our attorneys counsel those who have business dealings with the telecommunications and mass media industries: communications users, trade associations, equipment manufacturers and suppliers, investors and financial institutions.

Our Telecommunications practice group guides clients through the significant challenges of growth and convergence and our expertise covers national class action right-of-way litigation, transactional matters, international expertise, regulatory issues, and fiber and cable cut litigation.
